About Regent Street

London's premier lifestyle destination, Regent Street and its adjoining streets stand out as the home of flagships and firsts. From global fashion retailers, such as Burberry, Coach, Michael Kors, J Crew, Kate Spade and Hunter, to the very best in beauty, wellbeing and fitness from Kiehl's and DryBy to Psycle and Rapha. Some of the city's most coveted food and drink destinations can be found on Regent Street and nearby, including dining hot spots Heddon Street and Swallow Street. From Gordon Ramsay's Heddon Street Kitchen and exclusive two Michelin star The Araki, to fine dining Italian at Frescobaldi and casual dining at Thomas's Cafe at Burberry. Regent Street's neighbours including Conduit Street, Mortimer Street, Great Marlborough Street and Brewer Street house some of London's best loved boutiques, independent stores and hidden gems.

In 1954, following an article in the Daily Telegraph that commented on how 'drab' London looked at Christmas, Regent Street became the first central London destination to introduce festive lighting and decoration for the enjoyment of the public. It was the retailers and businesses that made up the Regent Street association that organised and financed the first display. Both the lights schemes and the switch-on moments over the years have become firmly anticipated fixtures in the festive period in London.
